September 2016 Newsletter
Vol. CLXXVIII

Hi, Friend!

Whale hello there!

September. My favorite month. Such a wonderful time for a reset. Are you settling back in after a busy summer? I'm trying, but to no avail—I'm all over the place this fall (more on that in a minute).

Remember the new standalone book I told you about last month? I just finished it! My editor and I will be polishing like mad over the next few months, so I'll keep you posted on its progress. Inside secret: it's different than anything I've ever written....

Books for Your Collection

Speaking of books, I've got two in brand-new formats for your reading/listening pleasure.

The FIELD OF GRAVES audiobook is now available!

Perfect for road trips, gym time, cleaning the bathtub (hey, we've all got to do it), or anytime you need to pop in your headphones.

A new audiobook? Yes, please!

THE END GAME paperback goes on sale 9/6!

For those of you waiting on this paperback, it's finally here! This 3<sup>d</sup> Nick & Mike story is now at a lovely low price.

You had me at "paperback."

Catch Me If You Can

J.T.'s Fall 2016 Events

Like I hinted earlier, there will be no settling for J.T. yet —because I get to hang out with y'all!Here's where I'll be this fall. And then, like I do every year, I will hermit. Because I am an introvert who writes books for a living.

September's Recipe: I love you, pasta...

Shrimp Scampi Penne with Bacon & Parmesan

I discovered this by accident in Deadwood, South Dakota (I know, the place we all think of when we hear scampi...) on a recent family vacation to the Black Hills. I ordered the scampi, which was delicious, but my brother had some bacon left over from his wedge salad, which I stole and popped it into my bowl, and cue the signing angels from on high.

It's an incredible combination, almost a scampi carbonara. Hmm, that's an idea....

Bring on the carbs!

That's it from me! Enjoy the newly sharpened pencils and fresh notebooks, the onslaught of pumpkin-flavored treats, cooler weather, and the return of football (go, Vols!). I'll talk to you again soon!

XOXO,

Let's be friends. I don't bite!
